Dear Friends,

We are comfortable with the image of gentle Jesus, meek and mild. We like that image. But perhaps there is something not quite right about it. He probably didn't have blue eyes and blond hair and, whether we choose to follow him or not, we can accept that Jesus was rather more radical and dangerous than we sometimes like to think.

He could have stayed at home with his trade and family, his village synagogue and familiar friends. Instead he left home and became like a wandering minstrel, singing a new song that many "safe" people did not want to hear.

He gathered disciples; not the outstanding citizens of respect and great influence, but ordinary working people. He associated with undesirable characters: aliens like a Roman army officer; despised tax collectors, Samaritan women, a Phoenician woman; he allowed a woman to weep at his feet and then wipe them with her hair. He touched lepers, and let an 'unclean' woman to touch him; he did things on the Sabbath that were not considered proper; he spent time in a cemetery with a raving lunatic. He told radical stories, challenged the accepted wisdom of Moses, and single handed caused havoc among the traders in the temple court.

All sounds a bit too dangerous to be entirely comfortable. But then maybe following Jesus is not meant to be comfortable.

John

Are you getting the most from your medicines?

Collins and Butterworth's pharmacy offers a free NHS service called a 'Medicines Use Review' for people who are being prescribed more than one drug or have been prescribed a 'high risk' medicine. The review is a totally private discussion with the pharmacist to discuss all the medicines you use and how they interact. This includes prescription medicines, over the counter medicines, creams, ointments, lotions and/or inhalers you use or are thinking of using. Pharmacists study drugs and medicines for five years so you will receive expert advice and, if you need another ear to help you remember what the pharmacist says, you can take a relative or carer in with you.

The review is designed to help you get the most benefit from your medicines and the pharmacist will check that any over the counter drugs or vitamins you take are compatible with your prescribed medicines. Phone the pharmacy to book a time that's convenient for you. Hawkshead surgery PPG
